Notes/Key Points from Discussion:

- Considering things about service providers' everyday life
 - Demographics are essential to consider when
- Circling back to the research question- what questions do we ask to answer it:
 - Demographics: Where are you from, how long have you lived in Prince George's County, and how long have you been a service provider?
 - Usability: What apps or platforms do you use the most daily (work and personal life)
 - Helps to lay out a potential platform and the experiences they're used to having online
 - What are the biggest challenges you face when using technology in your job?
 - How do you find trustworthy resources?
 - What are the success rates of the resources you use and
 - What are the current limitations in using technologies in the office versus in the field?

- Do you use more than one service to connect to more than one community
 - Relate to Internet usage
 - How do you find the resource to connect a user to the right person
 - What challenges do you have
- Information Overload and Painpoints
 - How long do you search for a solution before you choose one and give up?
 - And how long does it take you to find a resource or solution for your clients?
 - Silos: some organizations are not properly communicating with each other
 - Networking of the service providers:
 - What kinds of support would make your job easier
 - What technologies are your clients most familiar with?
- Future iterations: What might be the best solution for these demographics (user personas)
- Interviews: scheduling interviews with service providers by Antonya
 - 5-6 people
- Meeting again next week in order to schedule interviews
- Future meetings will involve laying out user personas for the remainder of the semester
